ABOUT ALLY

Ally Kelly is the CEO and founder of Mind Blank, a health promotion charity which aims to reduce the risk of suicide through interactive theatre. Ally has been at the helm of the unique charity for the past nine years, and her award-winning programs have directly impacted over 30,000 young Australians.

Ally's qualifications include: Master of Arts Majoring in Research in Social Justice, Social Inequality and Humanitarian affairs at the Griffith University; Griffith Award for Academic Excellence 2018. Bachelor Creative Arts 2010 University of Wollongong.

Ally's personal experience with mental health struggles and family experience with suicidal behaviour has fuelled her passion for mental health awareness. As a young person at school, Ally knew that services were available to help, but did not know how to ask for help, and realised the importance of promoting help-seeking methods and making the discussion about mental health and suicide prevention one that is accessible, inclusive and engaging.
